

Campy New Reality Show

One of my frequent guilty pleasures is underground music on <http://indiejamland.com>, but I went down a rabbit hole last time I visited, which I did not expect. The website designers – <http://goodcheapsites.com> had a white rabbit on their “news” tab. I couldn’t help but click it, but to my surprise, it took me to a whole new world of wonder.

Astronaut Training? What is this? Apparently, some site called <http://astronaut-training.org> is making a reality show about developing technology for space travel, and you can stream it on <http://prometheus-studios.com/features>. What a cool logo! The show was even cooler, in a campy clandestine kind of way.

The host is a really talented singer-songwriter, but to my surprise, I found out later that he is a scientist and engineer with a PhD in three subjects. Apparently, he is really serious about interstellar travel, and he has some fascinating engineering ideas to make it all happen. I have a bit of a background in science and technology, and it all seems to check out with my contacts in those fields.

It sounds like the host is casting for co-stars as of September 23, 2023, and he has a contact tab for more information. If that’s your sort of thing, you might investigate this opportunity.

Jove Fontagne
<http://eyewitness-news.com>